Rusty Banks (b.1974) is a composer, guitarist, and educator born in Jasper, AL and living in Mountville, PA. His compositions have been performed in China, Italy, Canada, and throughout the United States. Besides writing concert music for ballet, orchestra, and acoustic ensembles, Rusty "designs" pieces that use traditional performers, boomboxes, and video within dynamic audio/video installations. His music is thoroughly modern with an emphasis on beauty and invention.

Composer Michael Lowenstern, has an active career as a producer of electronic music both for his own works and in collaboration with other composers and performers. His playing can be found on over fifty recordings, including four solo discs: the critically acclaimed Spasm and 1985, Ten Children, which garnered a "Parenting Pick" award in Parenting Magazine's music listing for 2004, and his newest, Fade.

He lives in Brooklyn, New York, with his wife, clarinetist Katherine Cooke, and daughter Ariel.
